

Where can I camp?

You can generally freedom camp throughout the Waimakariri District on gravelled or sealed Council land set aside for parking. Look out for the prohibited zones at Waikuku Beach.

Travellers wanting to get closer to nature may prefer the Department of Conservation campsites at Wooded Gully. Mt Thomas is a popular picnicking area with views over the Canterbury Plains. It is also the starting point for a network of walks and tracks.

Camping is also allowed in the Waimakariri River Park west of Carrs Road. This park is controlled by Environment Canterbury and advice regarding camping in this, or the Ashley/Rakahuri River Park, is available through the Environment Canterbury website ecan.govt.nz

Freedom camper responsibilities

Waimakariri is committed to sustainability and asks all visitors to help protect our beautiful natural environment.

Freedom campers are asked to assist by:

- removing all rubbish, solid or liquid waste from the camping site when leaving
- disposing of rubbish, recycling and waste at approved sites
- using appropriate toileting facilities
- ensuring that all pets are appropriately controlled
- abiding by all Council bylaws including barbeque use, camp fires, noise and animal control.

The coastal communities and beaches are only a short drive north of Christchurch City and make a great destination when travelling along State Highway 1.

Those travelling Inland Scenic Route 72 will discover the rural towns of Rangiora, Cust and Oxford. Oxford is known for its tranquil rural setting, cafes, art gallery, Sunday Farmers Market and boutique shops. The bustling towns of Rangiora and Kaiapoi are worth exploring to catch up on shopping, take in a movie, stretch the legs in a park or just relax at one of the many restaurants, cafes and bars.
